

The QI Philosophy

10 principles that change how you approach every qualifying interview

1. 100% Success

When you adopt this philosophy, every QI is a success -- because the outcome is never about getting a yes. It's about sorting, showing, and moving forward.

2. Separate Lookers from Non-Lookers

Your job is not to convince anyone. It's to find out who's already looking.

3. Pull, Don't Push

Attract people with curiosity and genuine interest -- never chase, beg, or pressure.

4. Filter, Don't Funnel

You're filtering for the right people, not funneling everyone through. Quality over quantity.

5. Show and Go, Don't Beg and Sell

Show the plan, deliver it with confidence, and move on. Let the plan do the work.

6. Pressure on Them, Not on You

The decision is theirs. You deliver the information -- they decide what to do with it.

7. Tell Them Everything, or Tell Them Nothing

Don't play games or drip information. Full picture or no conversation. Transparency builds trust.

8. You Need Me, I Don't Need You

This isn't arrogance -- it's posture. You have something valuable. Believe that.

9. You Need People, Not One Person

Never put all your hopes on one prospect. Keep your pipeline full.

10. Activity Based, Not Results Based

Focus on what you can control: the activity. Do the work and the results will follow.

"Master the philosophy and every QI becomes a win -- regardless of the outcome."
